

Weekly [05/27] Study

SET

MAY 27, 2026  PAID

Good Morning Traders!

My previous update had framed my view of the auction. I had placed emphasis on Price trading above Value and to be cautious of potential traps being placed. Plenty of forewarning of my continued bullish bias and expected extremely sharp moves.

You can read about it below.

The recent activity has now done the same amount of exploring above balance.

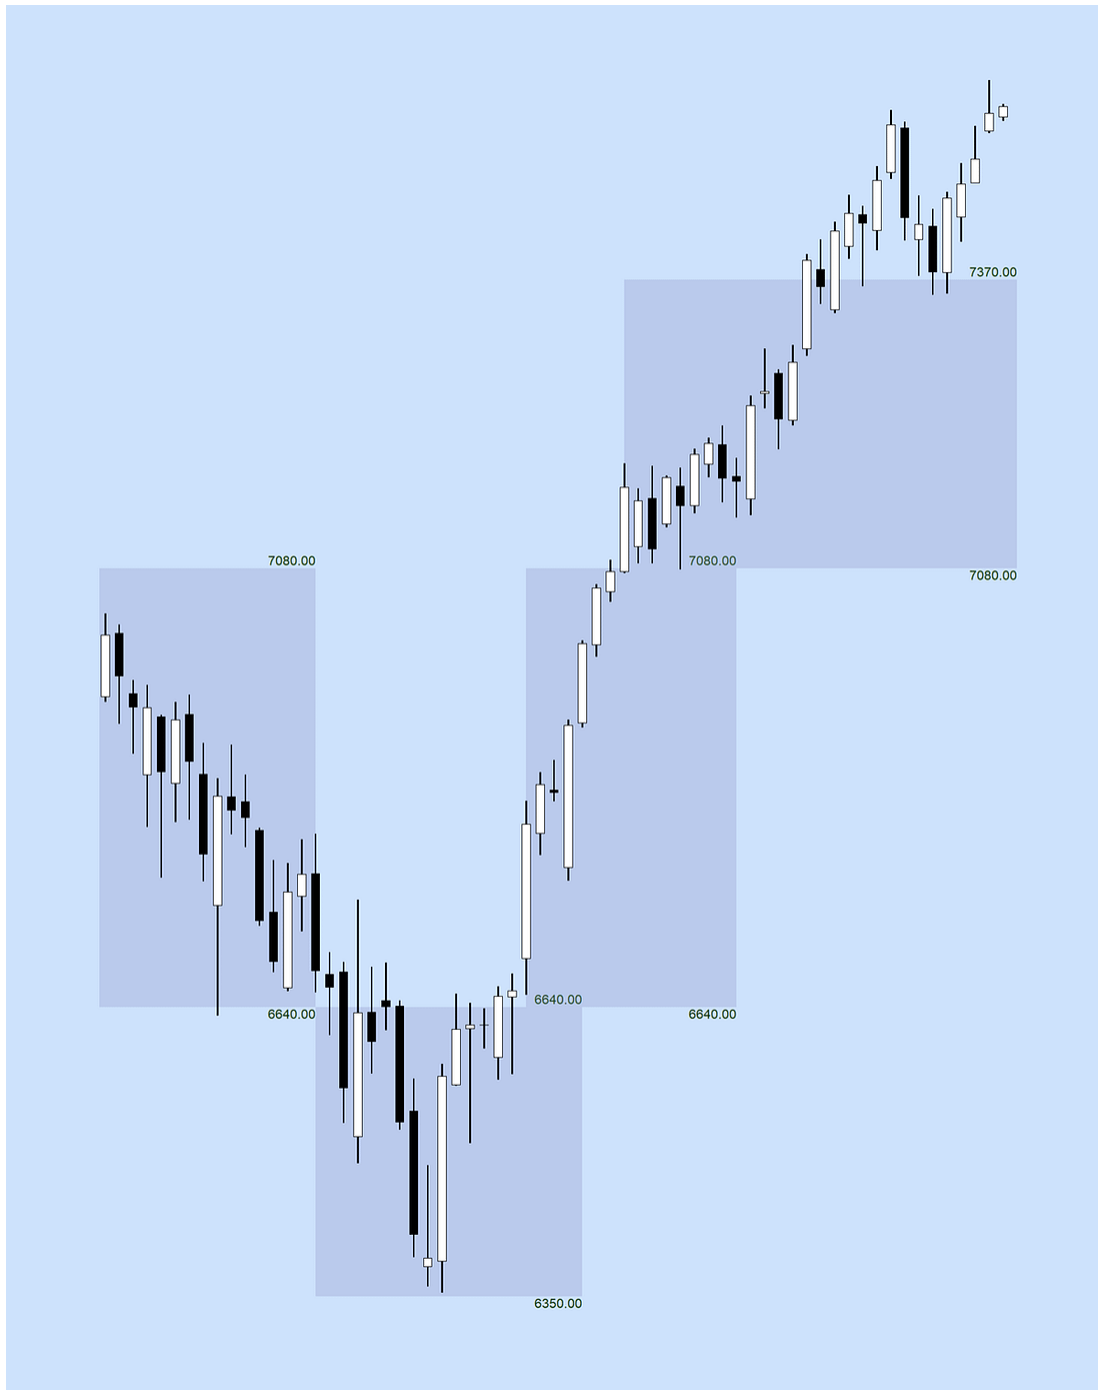

This may be the Crux of the entire Auction.

Weekly [05/11] Study

SET • MAY 11

Read full story

Since the update, Price traded above the Auction and was met with a Rejection into New All Time Highs. This set the bait for the expected Trap as participants battle against the posted High and our Support at 7370.

Buyers will have to convincingly trade above 7500 and from there may overshoot into 7800 if headwinds remain at their sails.

In Hindsight it can be understood that the Initial rejection into 7500 may have just been a 'Take Profit Liquidation', but in real-time it was quite clear that my read into Support was Bullish.

Traces of Strong Passive Buying have been present into these liquidations. As Price traded into our 7370 level, I agreed with this Tape, and Pyramided even further. With this Low formed, as well as the re-initiation to Highs, the Auction is trying to undergo a change of state; From Balance to Buying.

Only if Price is able to maintain Strength above Strong Resistance I can get along with (yet another sequence of Buying High, Selling Higher-er).

With recent Daily Closes, I am considering the planned sequence to begin. However conditions aren't quite perfect at this point in time. Hear me out...

There are two very similar ideas in play.

1. Our current Buyer may have super aggressive ideas in mind. A continuous sharp rally from here would certainly generate the most chased liquidity.
2. A more precise move would actually be to wash the lows He formed, a repeat-trap scenario to convince Local Sellers into a backside trade that ultimately fails, again.

These two plans would determine my vehicle of choice in terms of execution. The former plan would be best approached in normal ODE fashion. Every session a Higher Entry and an even Higher Exit. I have expectations of consecutive Trend Days if Initiation is seen this week as the Market works through deciding 7600 now or later.

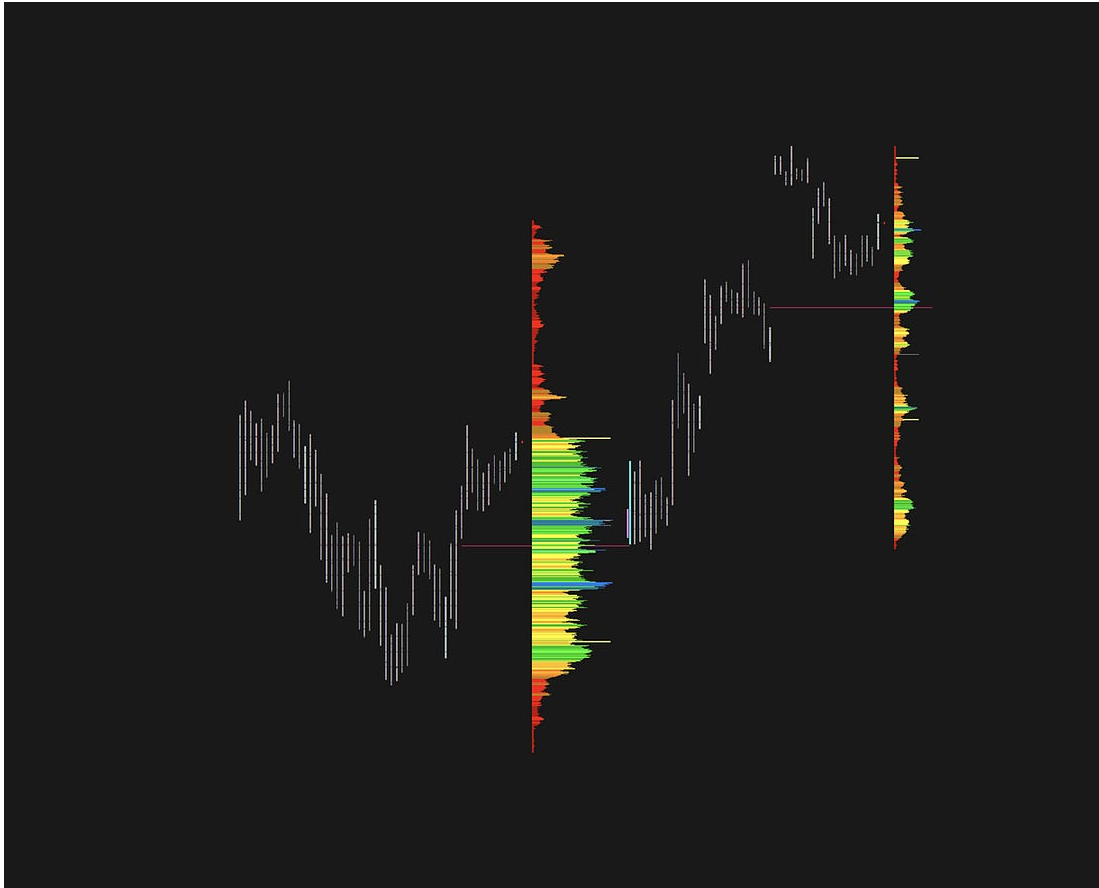

The later however would be best approached with more time in mind. This would allow another anchored entry that would have an appropriate Invalidation Pivot. A swing sequence (no.6) could be pitched if this tape is seen early next week.

3. I am not Bearish at all, and would need to urge for extreme caution if changes. I have been a committed Buyer since the Lows of 6400. Under most scenarios, I can see a fine path for even higher despite now trading 7500.

TLDR : 7500 + : Is worth a SetBid

TLDR : 7300 (or sooner) : Is worth seeking Sell.

My last release explains the preparation of this Plan and the realized outcome that we've seen since release. In logical sense, 7300 never traded; thus I was never a seller. As well as 7500 being secured; and so I am ready to continue leveraging my greatest long.

At the start of the Month I had mentioned that the Market was more poised as Balance. This was first seen by Orderflow, and now seen by many. Two-Way was conducted and now it appears as if that is done and it's time to Bid. Price is now overtaking the Initial Liquidation Profile and seemingly running away from the only reference left behind.

My Pullback Scenario would invite an entire liquidation of both Profiles above. Strange world we live in where a -100p or more Liquidation is expected to be actually a Bullish signal. C'est la vie.

My Pump First Scenario would invite One-Timeframe Up. Nothing but Up. The aggressive extension away from Balance is the first clue, but initiating beyond would almost certainly catch the majority off guard.

I would expect this draw to also be the 'quickest' way to entice a Seller to appear. Few Days / Weeks of Pump → True Blow Off Top (much later); Planned runway to 7800.

05/27 RTH+

Pivot : 7420

Longs to : 7800 / [xxx]

Shorts to : 7340 / 7160 / 6900

Best case (for me) is just letting the market rip higher with my levered position online. I'm in a rare position where size was done earlier, contrary to those participating with nearly none online. Runway to continue ATHs.

Best case for most present, is allowing a short target to form the last low.

I like my odds either way. Stay tuned here + SetX.